CHAPTER I

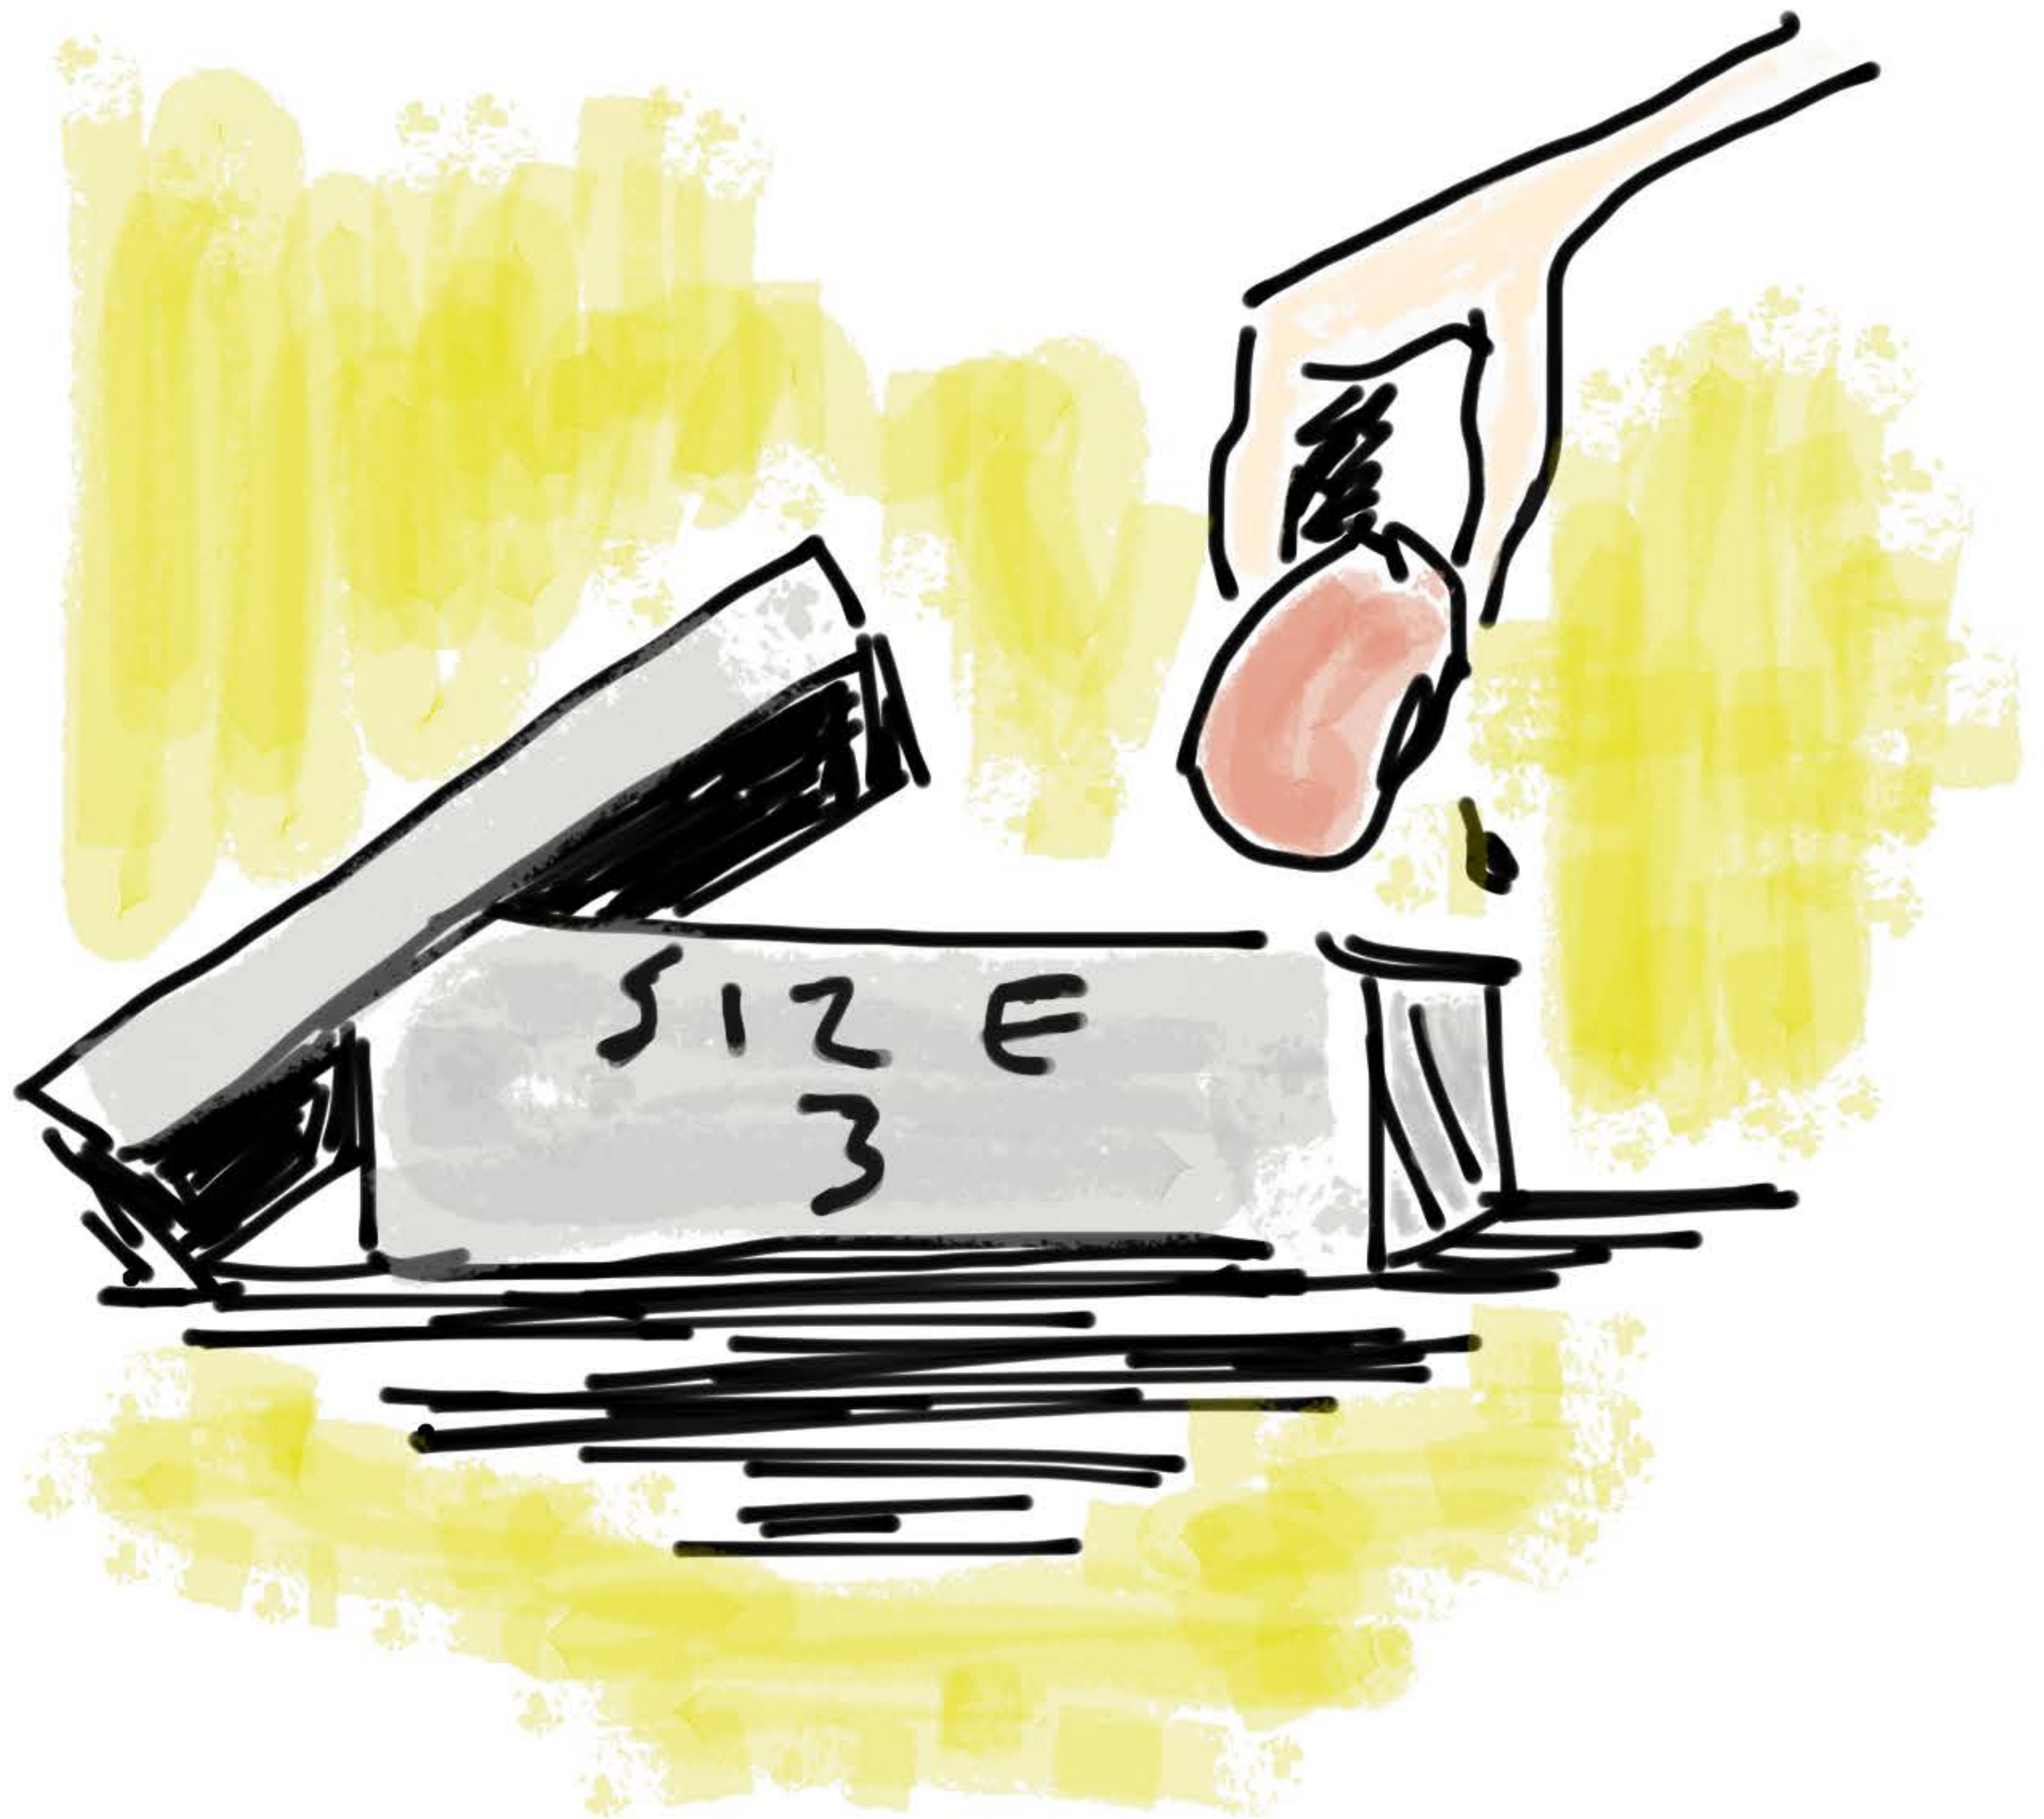

The little princess was walking in the garden when a bad thought sneaked up behind her and whispered in her ear, "Go into the forbidden forest." "Hi-Lee! Hi-Lo! Oh, No! Oh, No!" yodeled...

the little princess. „My mama said I mustn't go into the forbidden forest, and my papa said she ought to...

know." "But, but" butted the bad thought,
"Everything that you shouldn't do, every thing
that you mustn't do, are in the forbidden forest, and they...

include about everything it's fun doing. Think what a good time you could have."
So the little princess put a nutty hamburger in a shoe box for her lunch,...

vaulted over the garden wall and went into the forbidden forest.

CHAPTER 2

The little princess had not gone far into the dark and gloomy wood when she met Histah the snake.

"Have an apple," invited Histah. "What for?" asked the little princess.

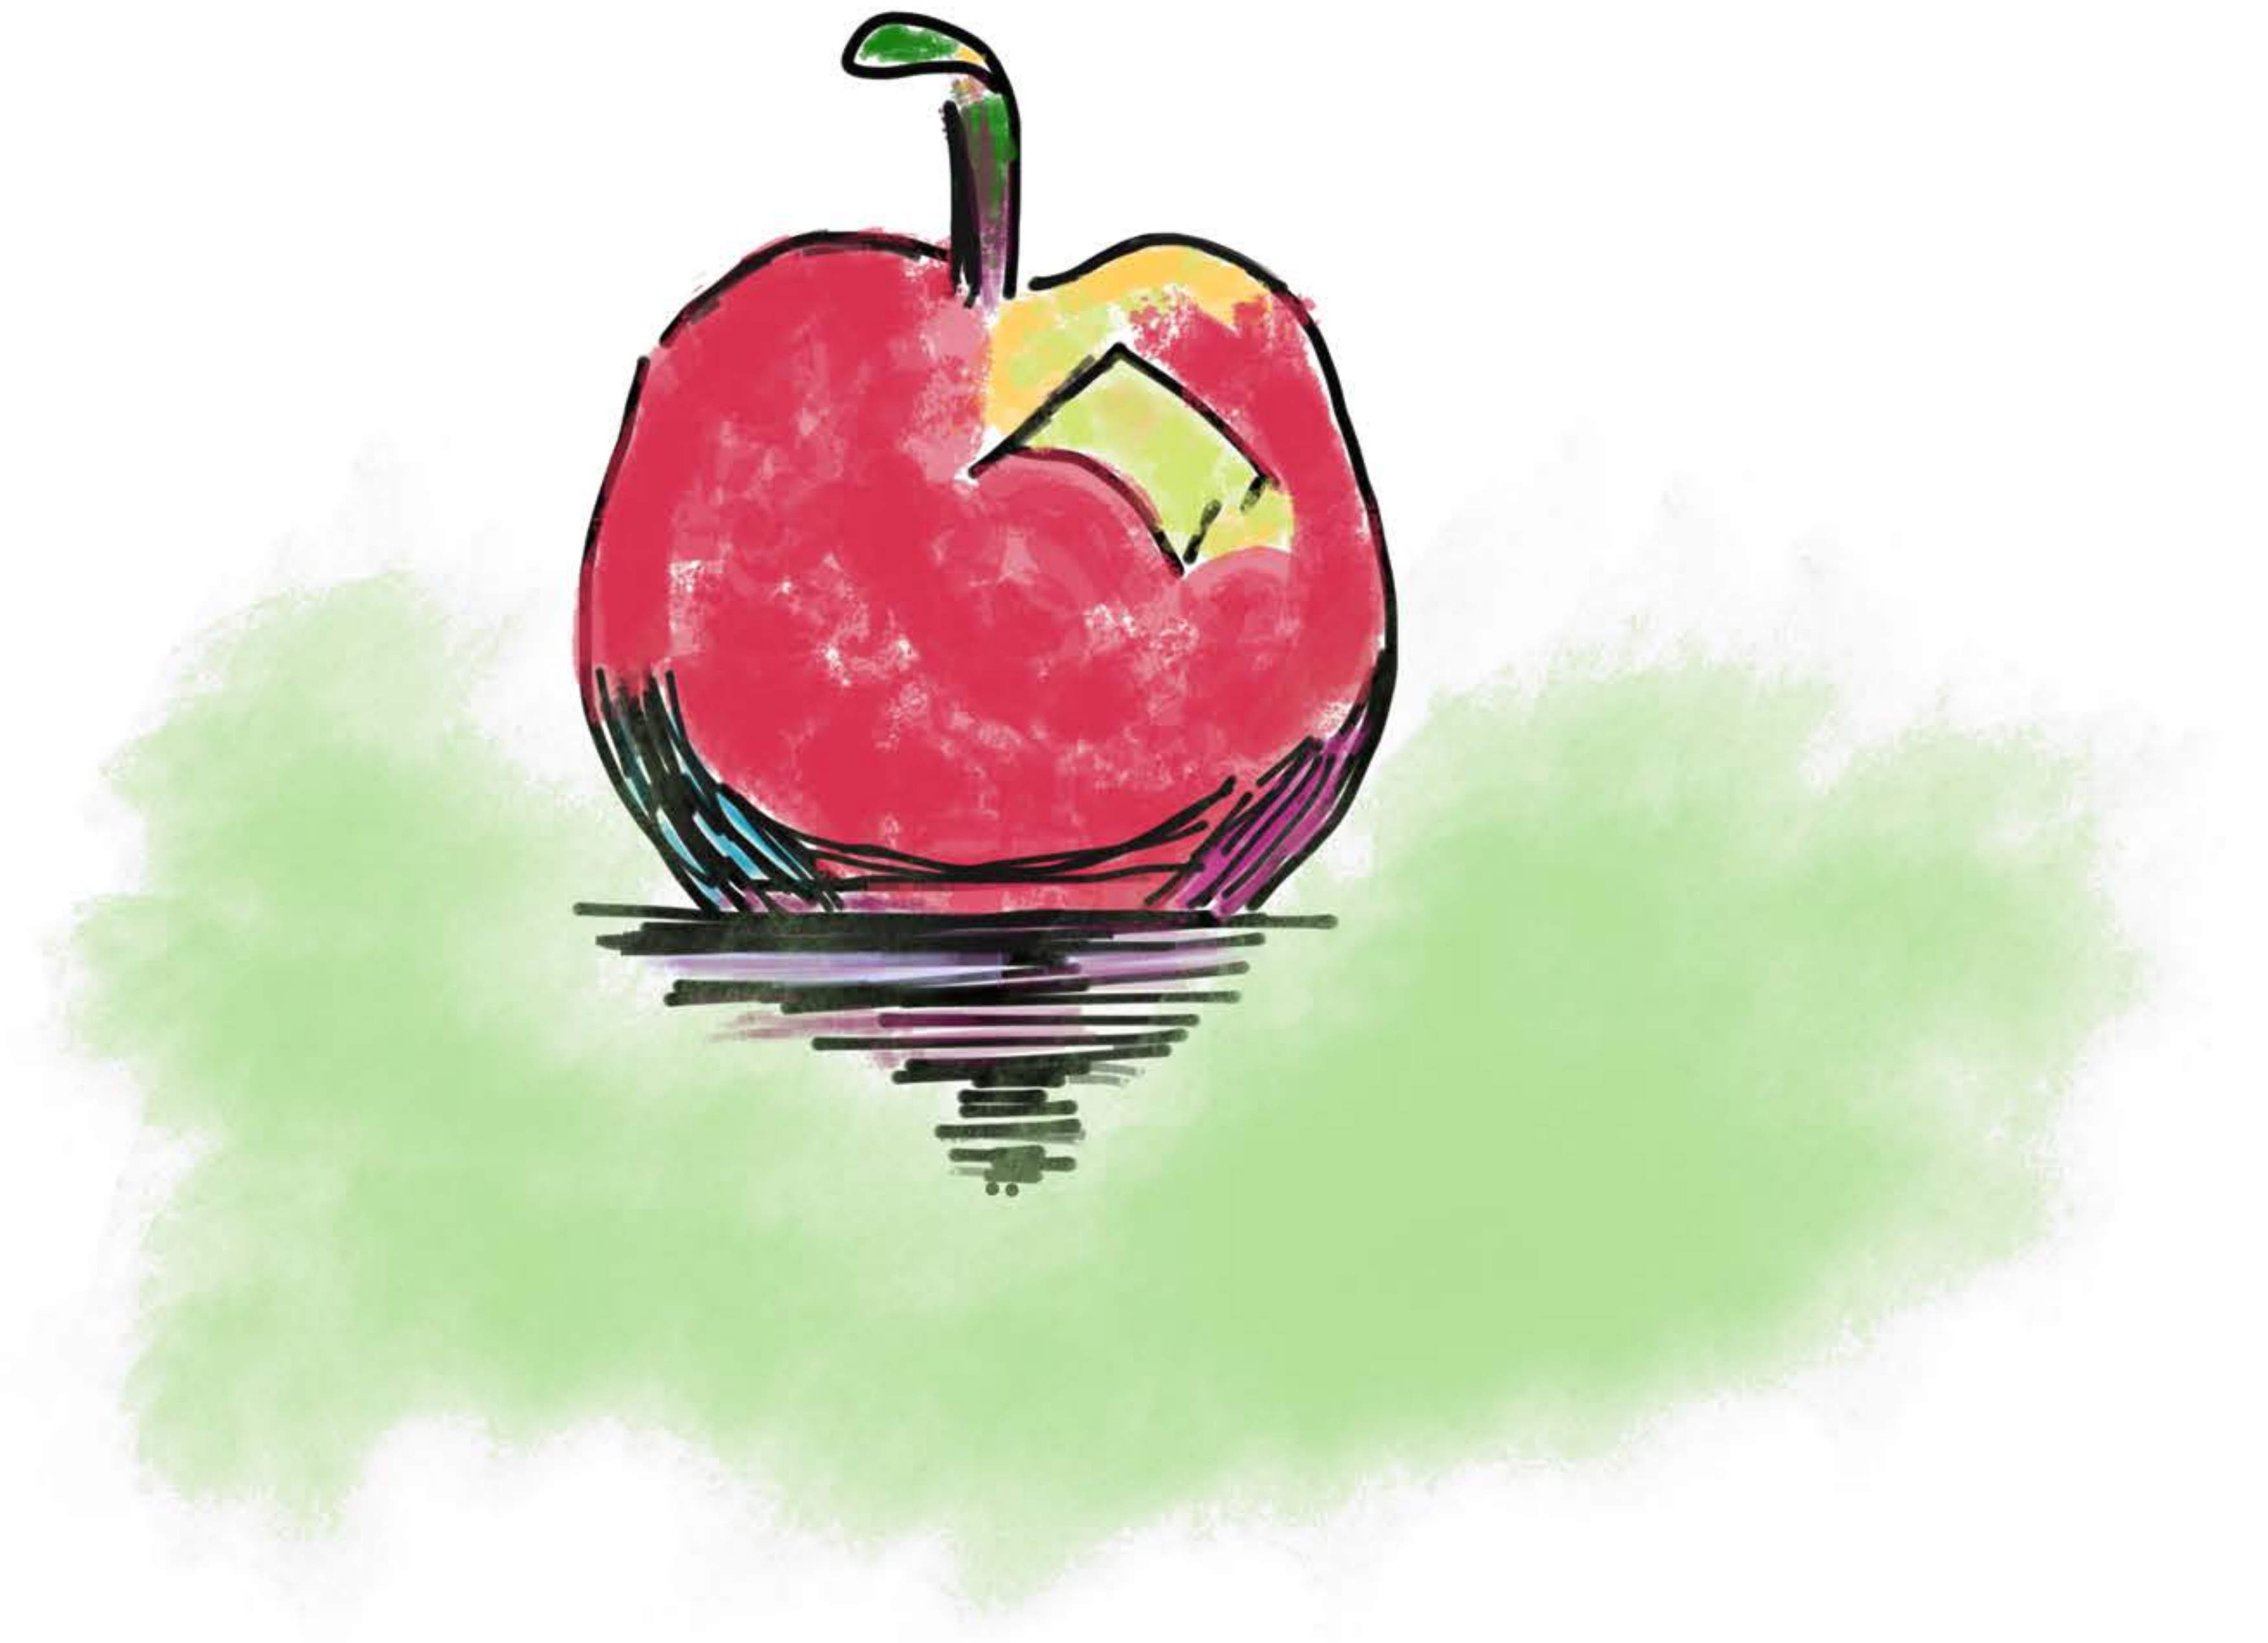

"It will keep the doctor away," replied Histah, pulling on his long black mustache. "But if I eat..."

it, I may need the doctor," countered the little princess with her left.

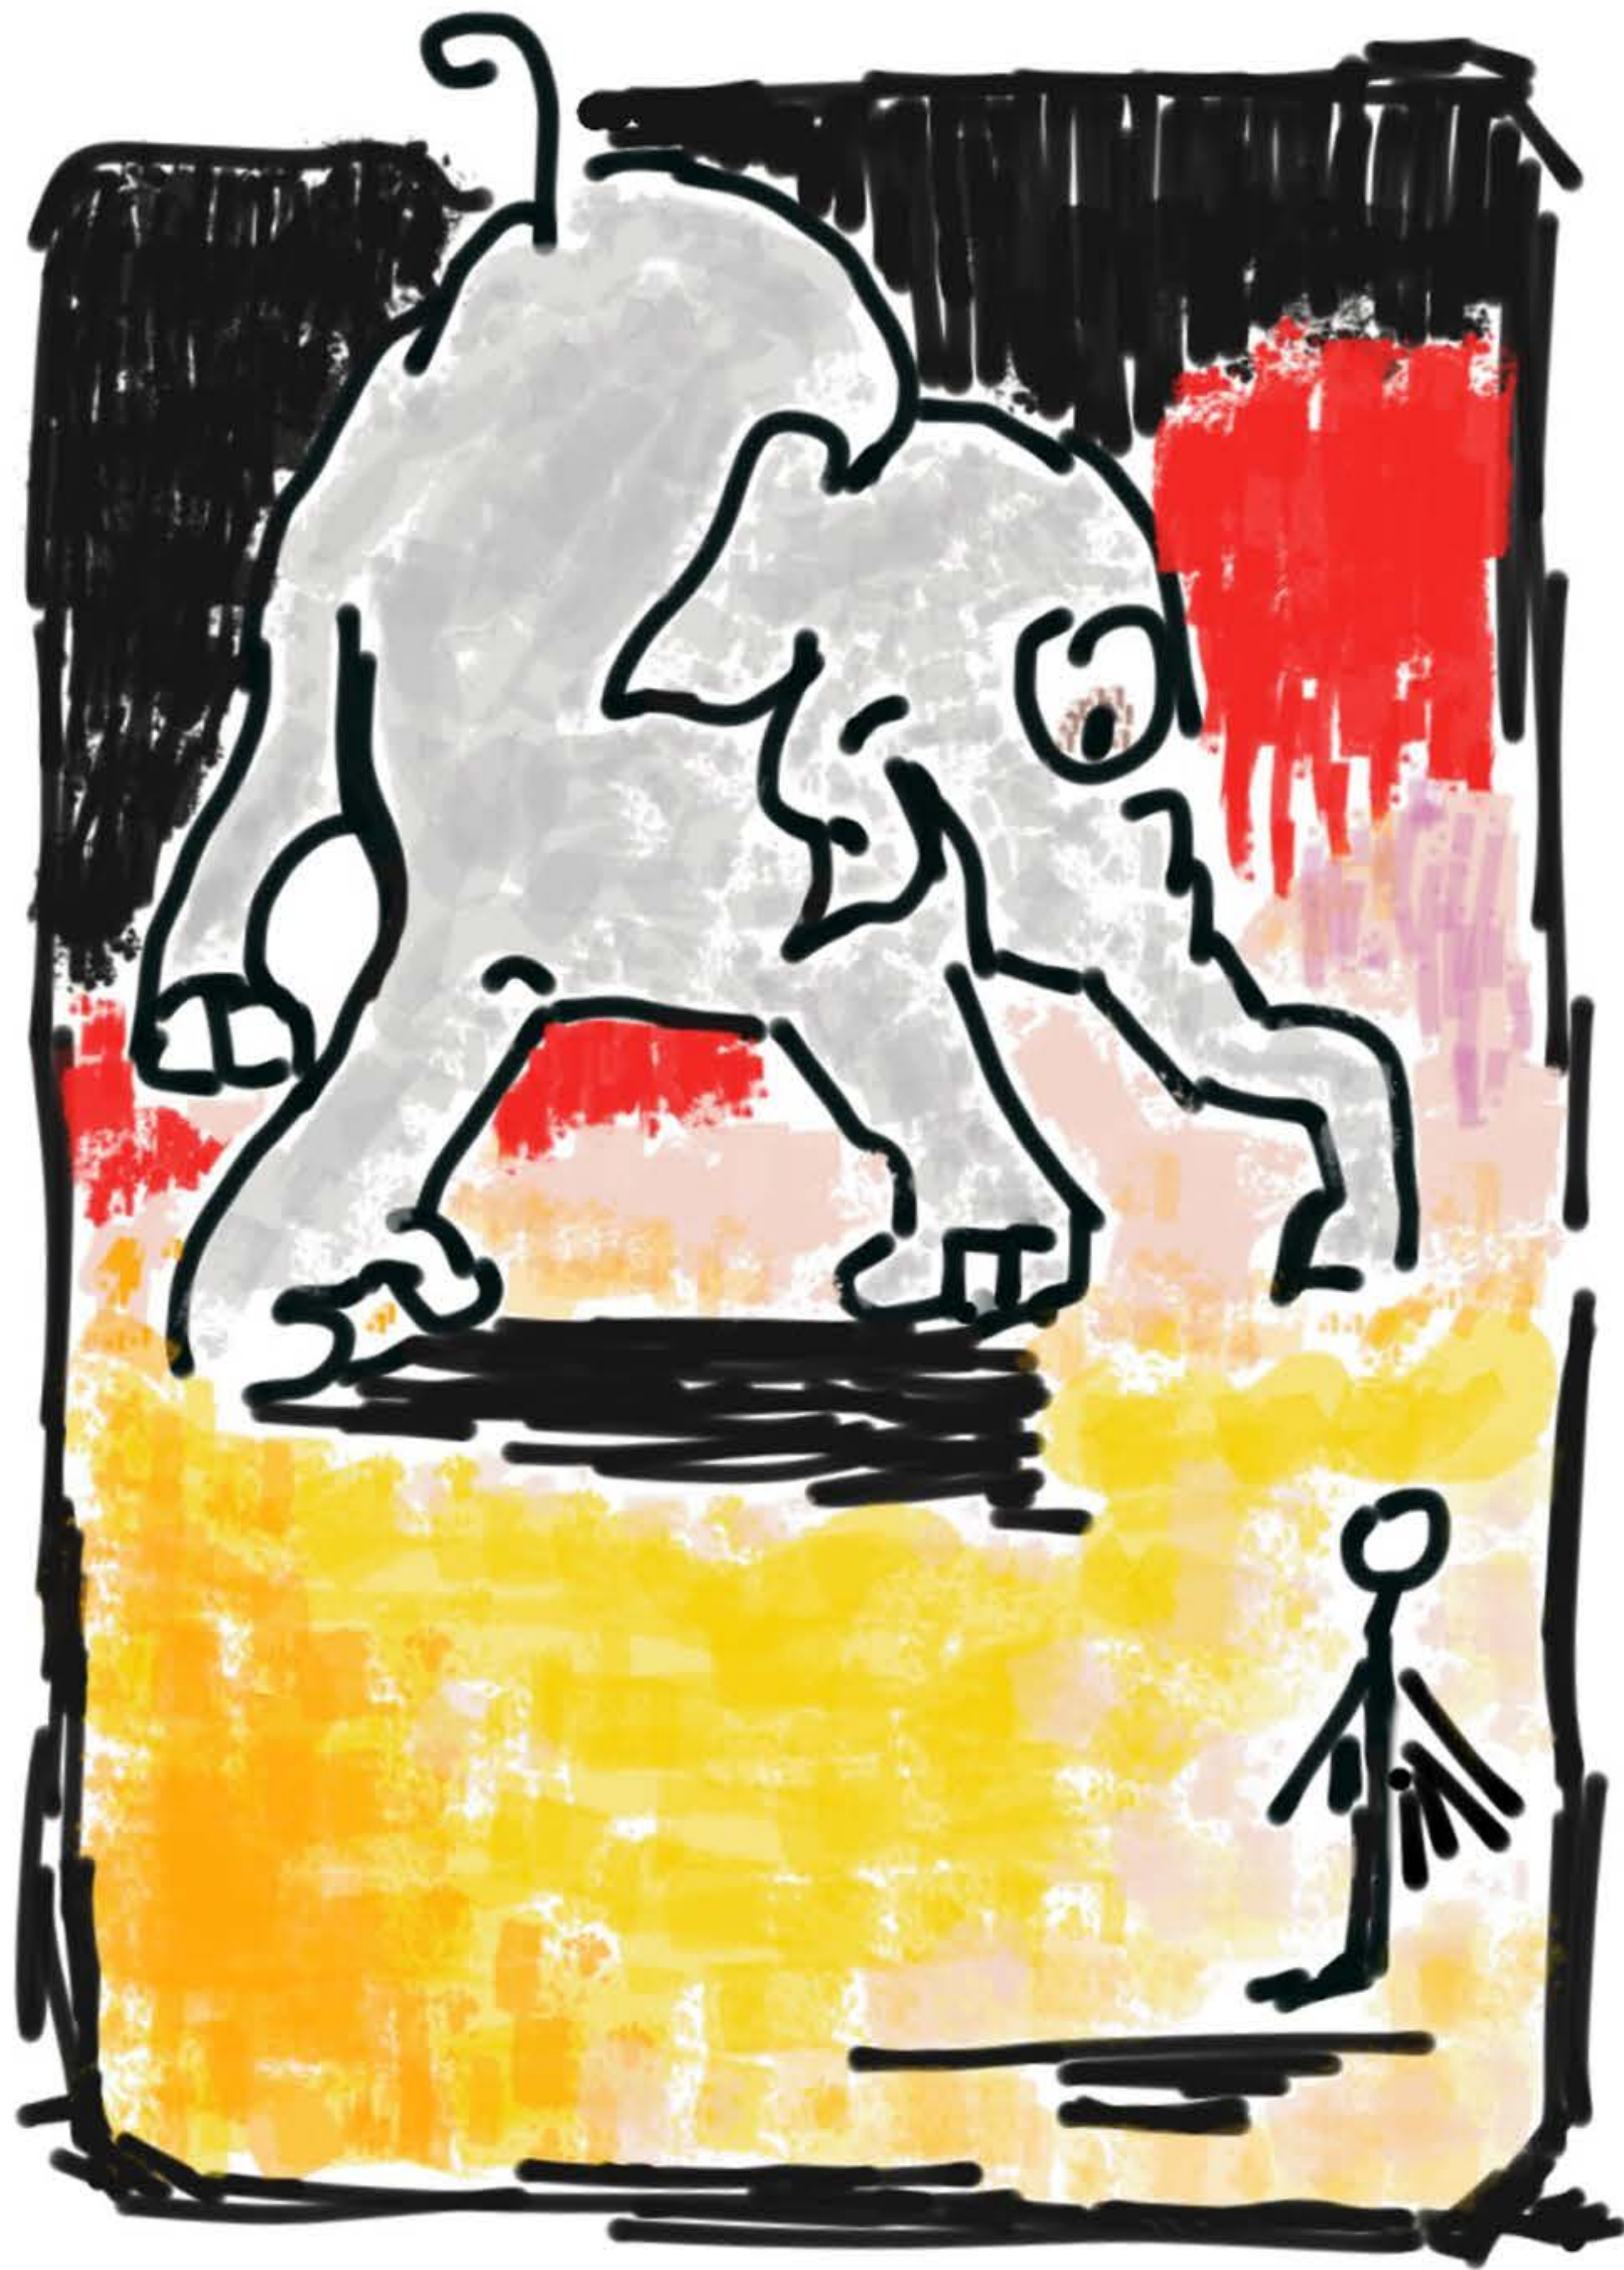

"Ah, ha! Foiled again," hissed Histah.

"Not so fast," cried the little princess.

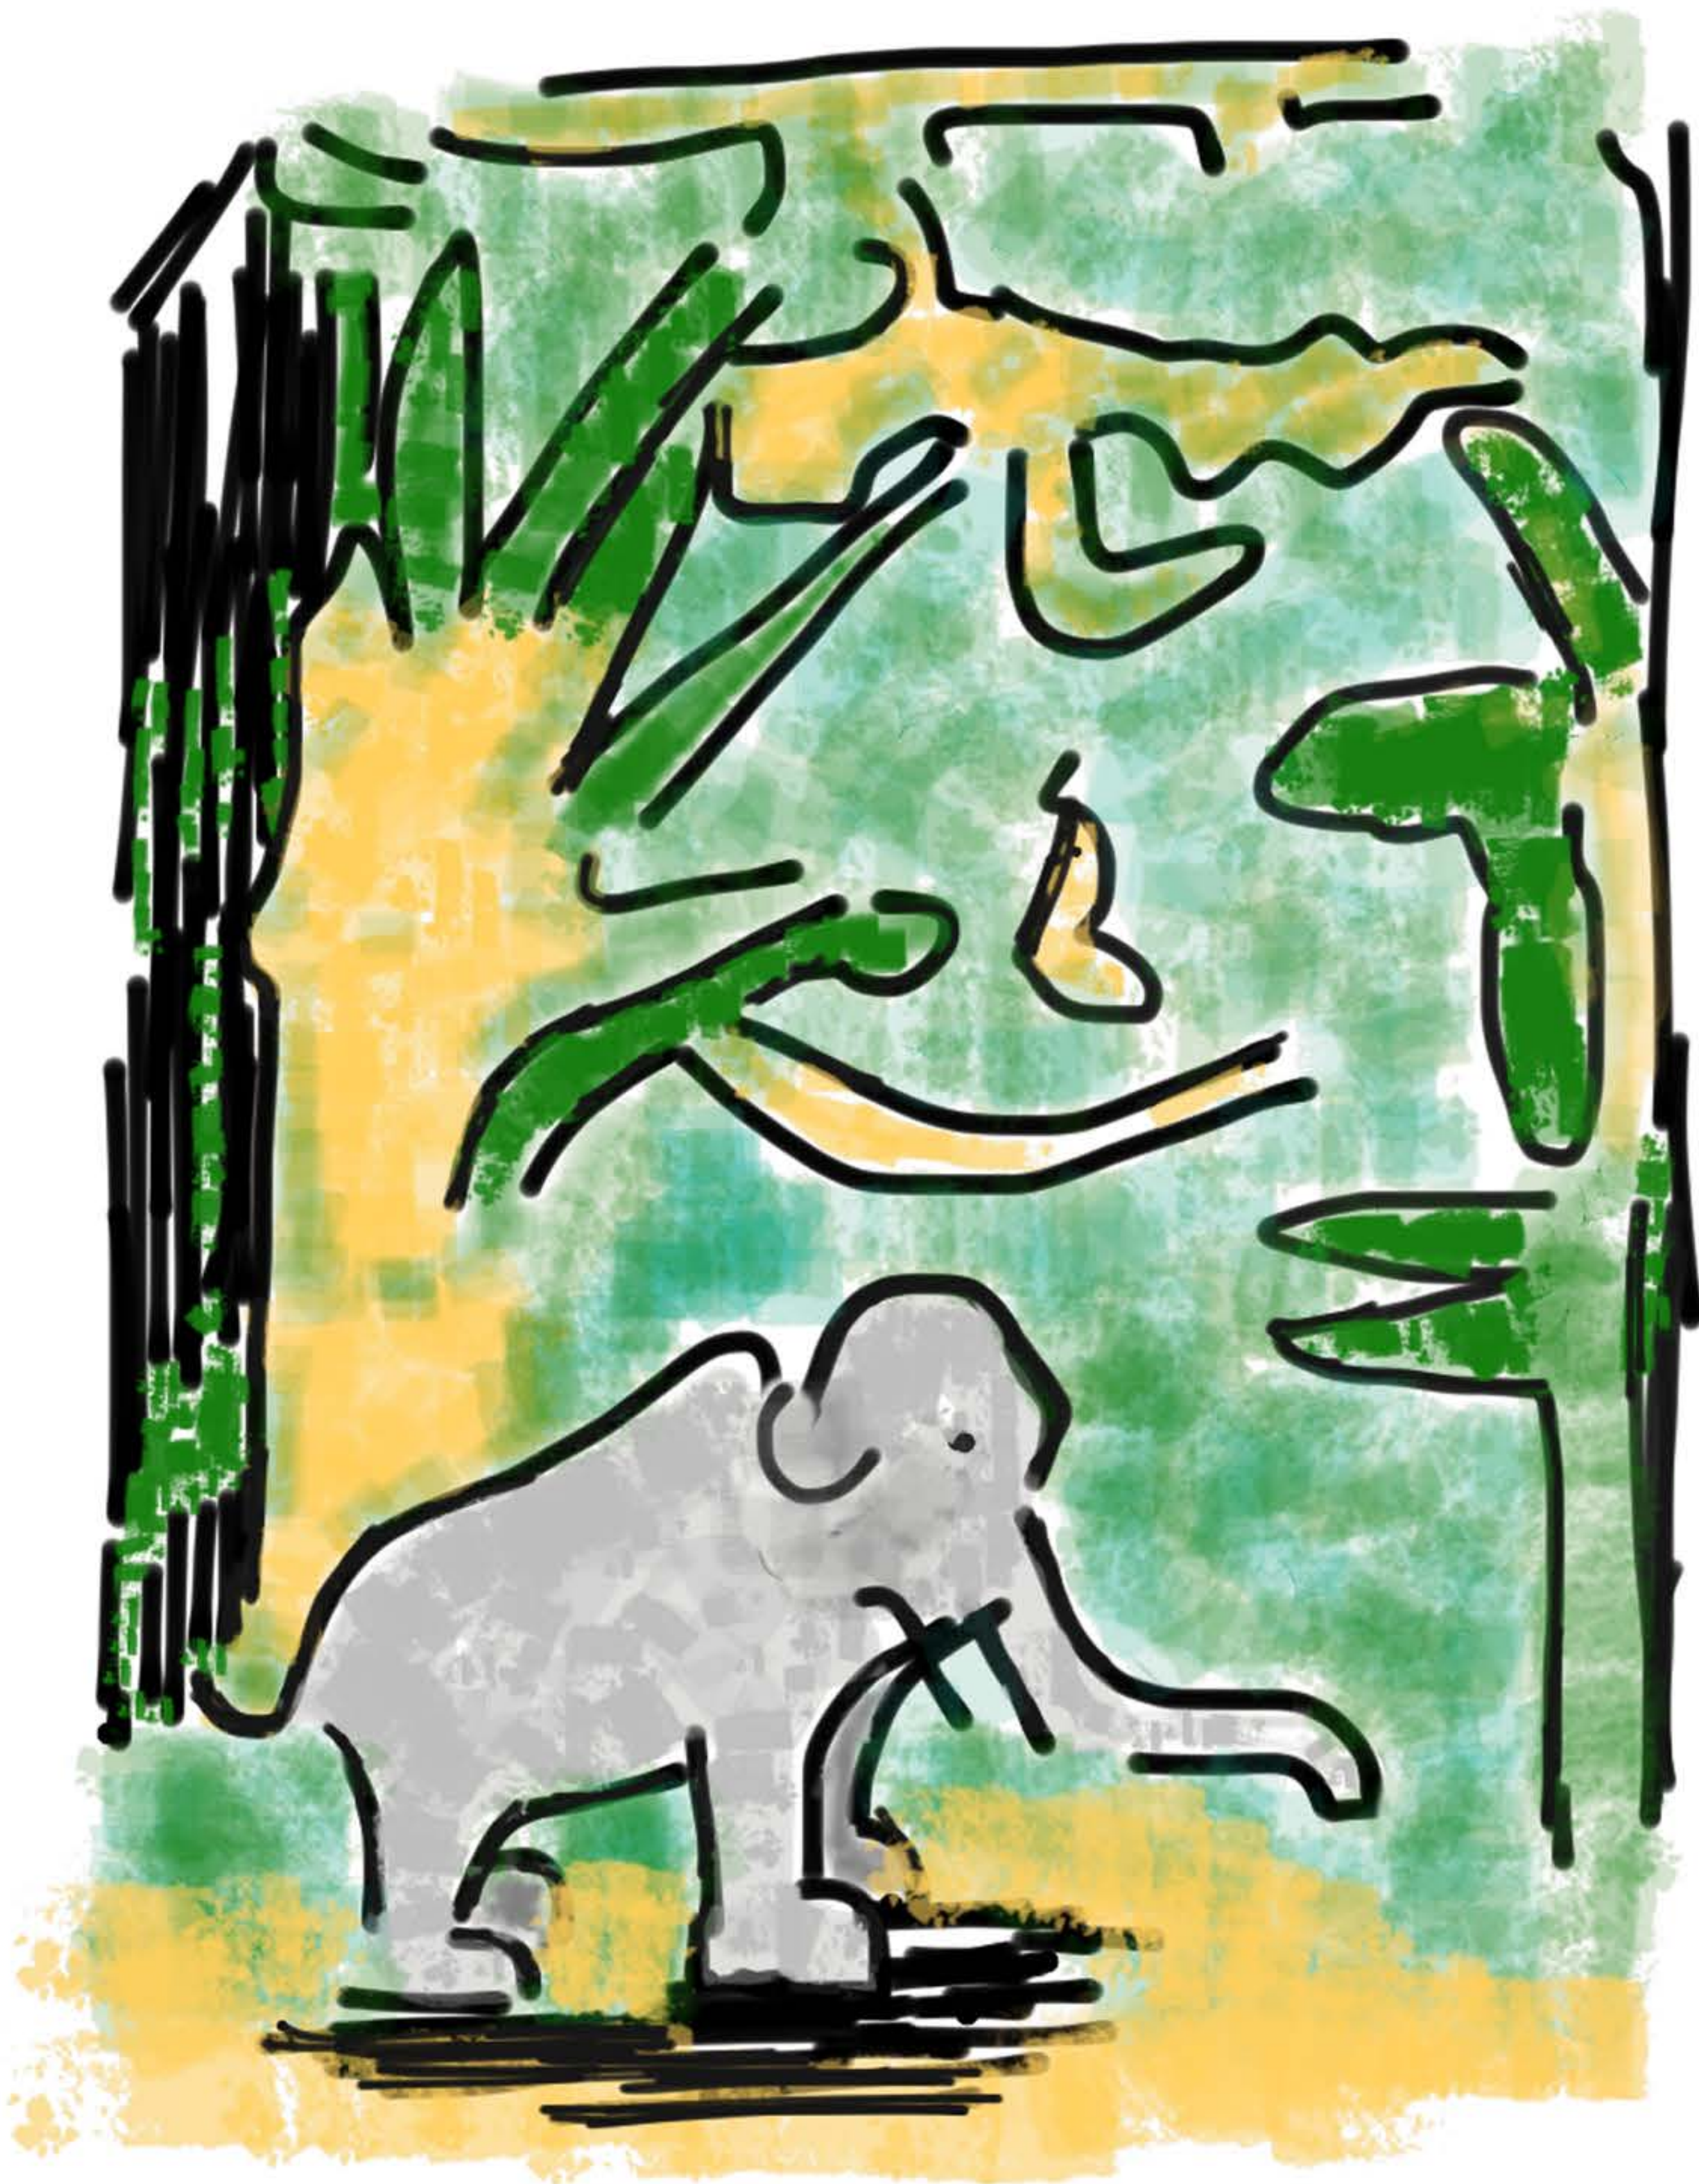

"Gimme the apple," for the bad thought had again whispered in her ear.

CHAPTER 3

The little princess was about to eat the apple when Tantor the elephant...

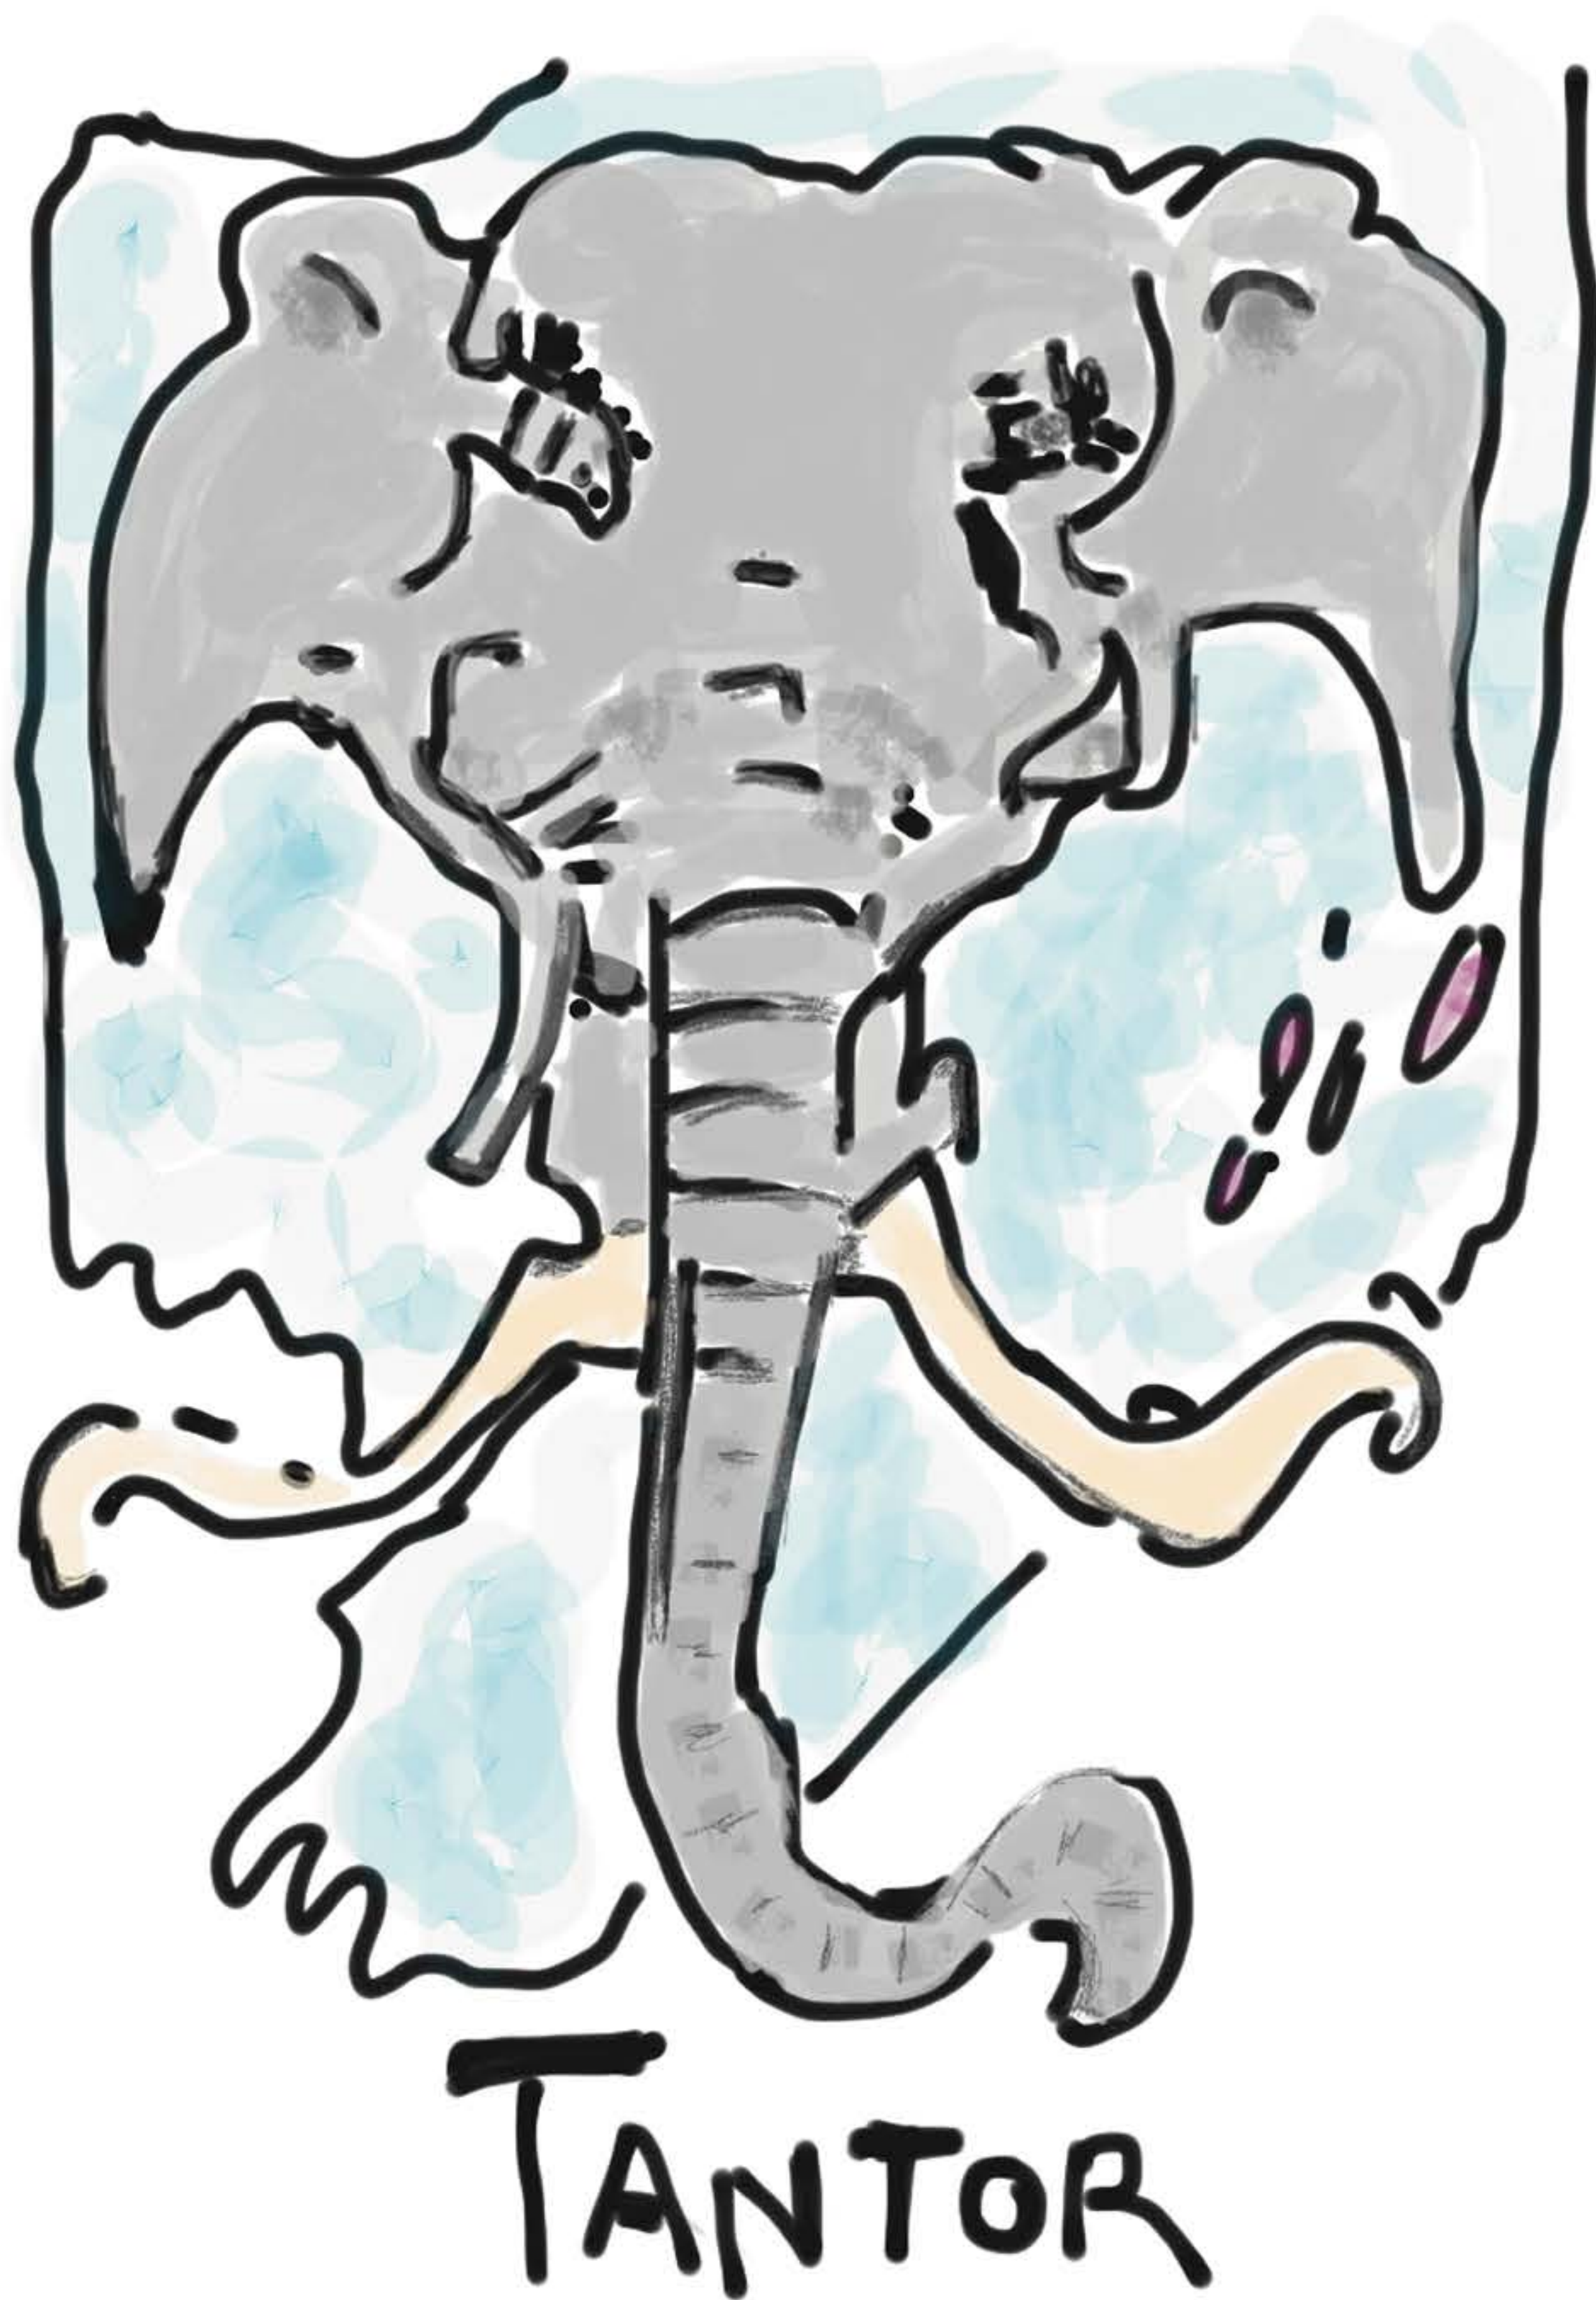

barged up and took it away from her.

"Beat it!" he trumpeted at Histah.

Then he ate the apple himself.

"What have you in that shoe box?" he asked.

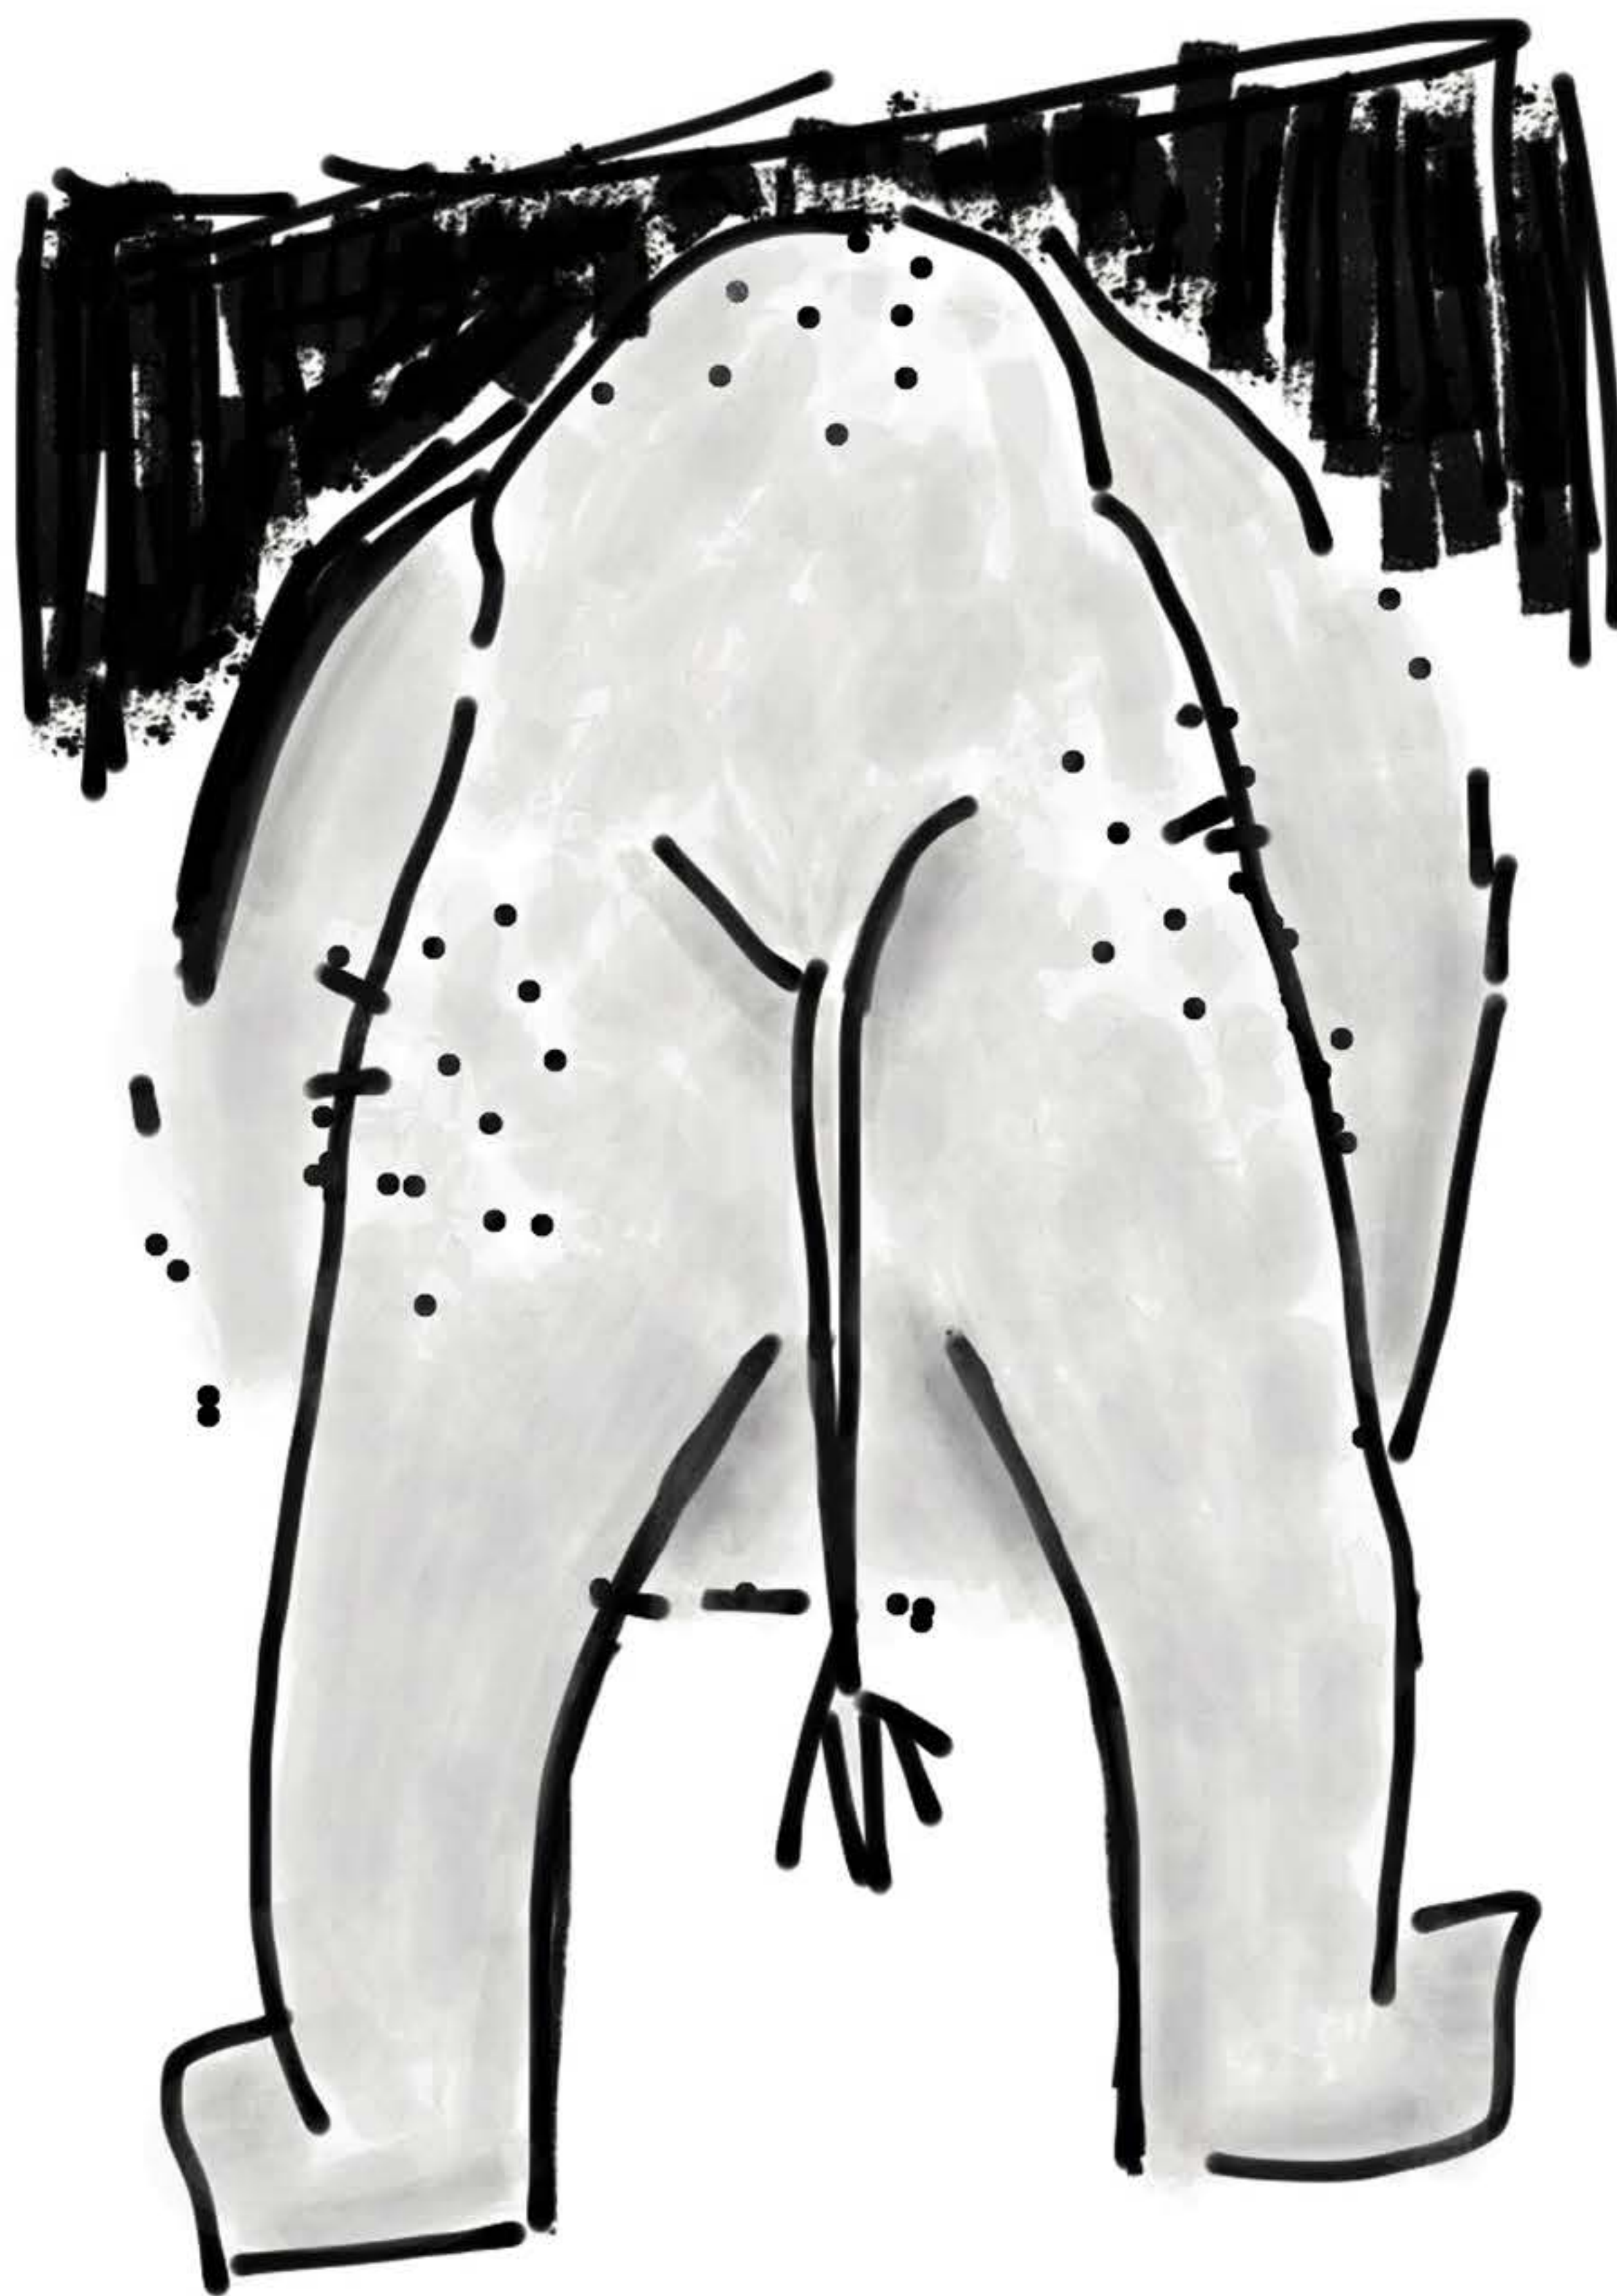

"A nutty hamburger," replied the little princess.

"Mercy me!" swore Tantor. "What's the matter with it? – Dementia praecox?"

"No, just plain..."

"Nutty," replied the little princess.
"Well, you never can tell when it might develop a homicidal mania," said Tantor. "Give it to me."
So he took the nutty hamburger...

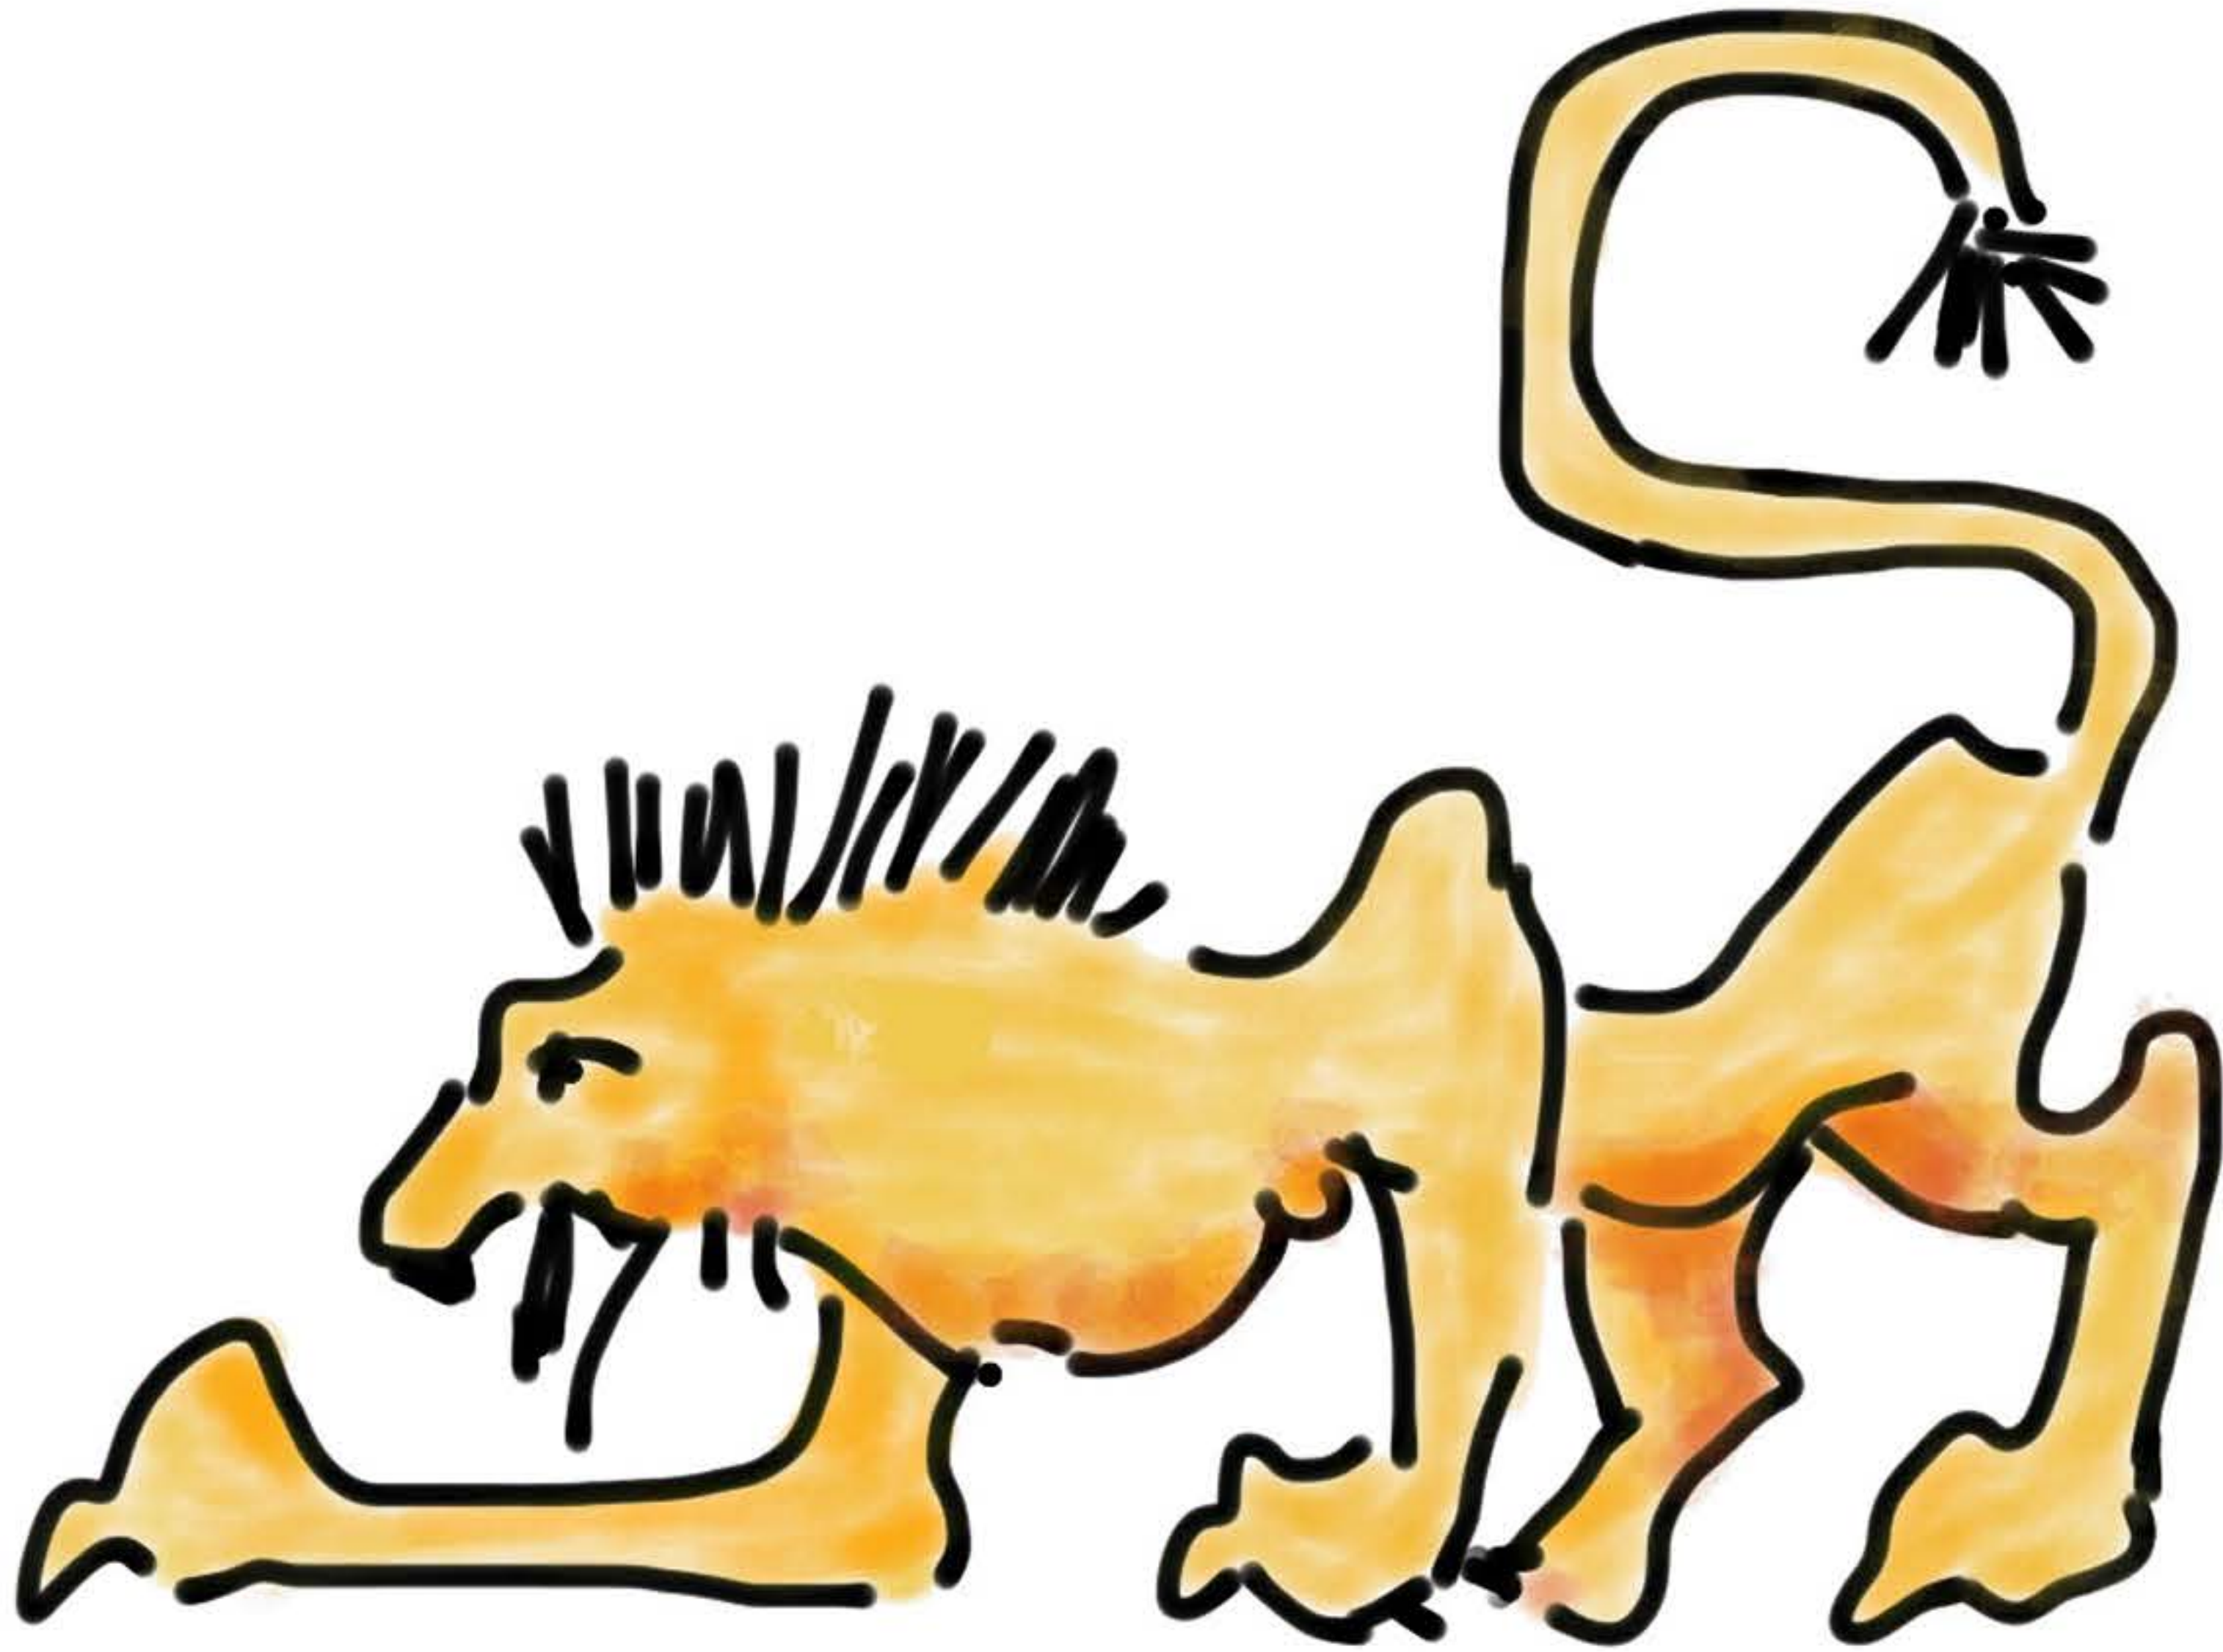

and ate that too. Then he went away from there into the land of ptomaine.

CHAPTER 4

The little princess was very hungry; so she went deeper into the dark, damp wood looking...

for another snake with an apple. But she didn't see Numa the lion stalking her. Numa, too, was very hungry; and as there are not many calories (sic) in stalks, he planned on...

eating the little princess.

With a terrific roar, he leaped for her.
The little princess turned, horror stricken;
when, to her amazement, she saw a...

bronzed giant, naked but for a G string, drop from an overhanging branch full upon the tawny back of the carnivore. It was Tarzan Jr.!

Once, twice, thrice his gleaming blade sank deep into the side of the great cat; and as Numa sank lifeless to the mottled sward, the Lord of the...

Jungle placed a foot upon the carcass of his kill, raised his face to the heavens, and voiced the victory cry of the bull ape.

CHAPTER 5

The little princess was still hungry.

"Let's eat the lion," she said, "unless you happen to have an apple in your pocket."

"I haven't any pocket," admitted Tarzan Jr.

"All right then," said the little princess.

"Let's skip it."

So, Tarzan Jr. uncoiled his rope and they skipped,
and skipped, and skipped; and then they got married and lived happily for - ever after - and that is what the little princess got for disobeying her mama and going into the Forbidden Forest.
